Biography

Sarah Nitchman received a Bachelor of Landscape Architecture degree from Rutgers University, where she was awarded the ASLA Certificate of Honor. A passion for design that connects people to nature in every context has led her to work in settings ranging from New York City to Central Texas to the remote Sierra Nevadas. Sarah is project designer for Reed Hilderbrand's multiple projects at Harvard Business School and Harvard's Allston expansion as well as a waterfront resort in the Peloponnese. An active participant in the professional design community, Sarah is currently Treasurer of the Rutgers Landscape Architecture Young Alumni Board.
